

CONVENTION CROWD FILLED WITH 'PEP'

Inhales Ozone of Bay and Then Returns for Night of Loud Noises.

HOTEL LOBBIES CHOKED

Orator on Mahogany Table Screams Tribute to Bryan —Laughter and Plaudits.

By a Staff Correspondent of THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—The day before the convention:

A day of rest for most of the crowd, an excursion across the Bay, and around the Bay and out to the Cliff House and down the peninsula to the valley, where dead ripe pines are falling from trees, and of churchgoing.

A long day of work for those who write the platform and boom the candidates and choose the candidates. Upper rooms of hotels full of men, smoking and arguing, promising and, like as not, threatening. All day the hotel lobbies, nearly impenetrable on Saturday night, are only fairly crowded. Josephus Daniels strolls through the Palace, and has plenty of elbow room in which to stop and chat with fellow Democrats—about the affairs of the Navy, of course.

Seating Capacity Announced.

It is too nice a day to linger around a hotel, and it's Sunday. The biggest pieces of obvious news is that they have for the last time and that the number is practically 10,847, of which 512 is for the "working press."

To-night the recreationists of the day swarm back to town. By dinner time you have to take the back way to get into your hotel. At 8 o'clock even the lobby of the St. Francis, which has more open space than that of the Palace, will not hold another human being. A mob outside the front entrance is trying to stand on its own shoulders and see what the "pother inside" is about.

A man has been hoisted to the top of a mahogany table. His legs and feet are hidden by flowers in vases. He is screaming something and part of the time the lobby is listening and part of the time it is screaming and hissing.

The first correspondent emerging from an elevator on the mezzanine floor, mounting a chair for a good look bears: "And when that great figure appears in the convention—"

"Name your man, name your man." "When there appears before the convention that great man who has borne the burden through the heat of the day and—"

"Name your man, name your man."

Howling Is Tremendous.

The howling is now tremendous and out in Powell street the overflow meeting has caught up the cry "Name your man, name your man."

"He may have been defeated," goes on the orator, his voice rising to the mezzanine floor in a yell.

"You bet your life he has, name your man."

"—but his cause has never been defeated. Throughout his illustrious career the man who has borne the burden of the crowd begins offering suggestions as to who this prodigy of noble perseverance may be. Some shriek 'The Crown Prince' some 'Boss Murphy' 'Carrie Pankhurst' and one says 'Gene Debs'."

The orator never stops. He talks on and on in pantomime until the crowd stops yelling just long enough to get a new thought. A brass band with a date at the hotel is now trying to struggle in and the doorway and sidewalk are a mess of brass horns and drums disintegrating.

"The result is in the lap of the gods. No man can foretell it," the orator is saying the next time they let him be heard.

"You said a mouthful there, old pal," roars a man whose complexion and accent may be of Tammany.

"Go ahead and say it; teacher's gone home," more confusion and a sweep of laughter.

"But I want to say—"

This time he is drowned out by groans. The spellbinder grabs a handkerchief from his coat pocket and wipes the salty drops from his brow. The cries "Name your man" are renewed and become a chant. The pantomime continues, and the next time he is heard he has come to his fixed peroration, the only audible words of which are: "—and the convention is going to nominate that man without a peer as a constructive statesman, that man who has devoted his life to the people and who has put more good laws on the statute books than any other man in the world, that man of superior intelligence, foresight and morality—"

"Name your man, name your man." "William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska."

Laughter and Applause.

The crowd broke into two divisions, laughing and handclapping, booing and cheering. A woman's voice shrieks, "Put him out!" and keeps repeating it. "Name your man" is yelled just as determinedly. "Keep him in!" And another man blows, "Dollar Bill!" "Dollar Bill!" All conflict is finally turned to laughter. The orator gets down. A man under a black cowboy's hat grabs his hand. Another "gives him an argument," as the New York police say. The orator is seen shaking his fist under the disputant's nose and addresses him. "The words 'dominant figure' and 'without a peer, I tell you,' are snatches that rise to the mezzanine. Somebody shouts 'Where's Bryan?'"

He is upstairs in his room on the second floor. He does not appear, although the tumult must be reaching him. He has memories of other crowds—Democratic crowds—that did not laugh at his name as this one does to-night. Maybe it was the orator's fault to-night. Maybe they would not laugh at Bryan himself. They seldom do, these Democrats, or if they do they repent on the morrow.

A motherly woman with a handbag nudges the mahogany table after the "Name your man" disappears. "I'm from Nebraska," she begins, "a delegate from Nebraska." She forgets parts of her lines, but there is no booing. But after the picture of the ideal of a candidate is wrecked by the same old challenge, "Name your man," she quickly obliges.

"I'm for Meredith of Iowa," she says, and gets down at the right time, so they all give her a cheer. The mock convention is still going. It is wild and noisy. The correspondent gets out through a cool room. A resounding band is smashing the night to sleep and there is a wealth of song, in which the voices of the Columbus Glee Club are identified.

Bryan Quotes the Bible Wrongly on "Peacemaker"

Special to THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—Gavin McNab, Petitioner of the convention, joined William Jennings Bryan at breakfast in the St. Francis this morning.

"What part will you play?" asked Bryan.

"The Peacemaker," laughed McNab.

"Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall inherit the kingdom of heaven," Bryan quoted.

"Excuse me, you've got it wrong," objected McNab. "It's blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall inherit the kingdom of God."

"Not a bit of it," Bryan protested. "I may not know much about politics, but I do know something about the Bible."

"The Bible," insisted McNab, "is my favorite book," and so it ended. Up to this hour a search in San Francisco for a copy of the Scriptures was vain and nobody could be found to settle the controversy.

But, both were wrong.

BATTLE IS CERTAIN OVER PLATFORM

by offering a plank which is just as wet as Mr. Bryan's is dry. It starts off with approval of the prohibition amendment to the Constitution, but winds up with recommendations for changes in the Volstead enforcement law which would leave little of that much discussed measure for the prohibition officers to work on. Mr. Burleson showed his plank to-day to Senator Glass and was told by that little Virginian that he ought to have remained at home instead of coming out to San Francisco.

Adding to a business of a much harassed Democratic organization, Mr. Burleson did not seem to mind irritating Mr. Glass in the least and went gaily about his business "talking up" his wet plank. He is getting a lot of encouragement from the so-called liberal element among the delegates, but it is not likely that he will get many actual votes for his proposition when the final show down comes. The delegates are too much afraid of the wet and dry issue in their local campaigns and the movement for sidestepping the question entirely is gaining support every hour.

Mr. Burleson's proposed plank follows:

"The open saloon has been generally condemned by the American people as a menace to society and the well-being of the people and its restoration should not be tolerated. The validity of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution having been sustained by the Supreme Court, any law enacted under its authority must be strictly enforced. However, the Democratic party pledges its utmost endeavors to prevent this new grant of Federal power from being exercised in such manner as to become oppressive or deprive the people of that individual liberty which it was the purpose of the union of States to guarantee and preserve through all time."

"The Volstead act, vetoed by a Democratic President and passed over his veto by a Republican Congress, is an extreme exercise of the powers granted by the Eighteenth Amendment and it should be so amended in strict conformity with the spirit and purpose of the Constitution, so as to eliminate therefrom its drastic and unreasonable features. We favor an amendment to the Federal Constitution requiring all amendments hereafter proposed hereto to be ratified or rejected by a referendum of the qualified voters of the several States of the Union."

The advocates of meddling by the United States in the Irish squabble were quietly informed by some of the big leaders to-day that they might as well forget all about their proposed plank specifically to pledge the Democratic party to aid the cause of Irish freedom, because the convention was to adopt a platform which would cover the subject broadly by an indorsement of President Wilson's doctrine of self-determination of small nations. But Bourke Cockran, who is to be New York's member on the resolutions committee; Senator Walsh (Mass.); Senator Phelan (Cal.) and other strongly pro-Irish delegates announced they would not forget their plank at all, but would carry their fight for it right into the midst of the convention, regardless of the consequences. If the resolutions committee did not do as they demand.

Another knotty problem for the platform makers is the soldiers' bonus. A meeting of world war veterans of this part of the country was held here last night, in which it was decided to demand a pro-bonus plank. The failure of the Republican Congress to pass the bonus bill and of the platform to mention it gives the Democrats a chance to make a plank of the "soldier" vote. If there is any such thing and some of the leaders want to take it. But Secretary of the Treasury Houston has declared the country is in no financial condition to stand such a heavy drain, and the leaders are therefore in a quandary.

REED DEFEAT AIDS G. O. P. IN MISSOURI

State Classified as Doubtful and May Go Into Republican Column.

Special to THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 27.—The "rolling" of Senator James A. Reed by the Democratic National Committee sent Democratic stock down several notches in Missouri, for the senior Senator had a big following in the State in spite of the Administration. Republican leaders hailed the action as a good omen for November. With Reed's friends they have claimed from the beginning of the Reed-Wilson feud that an Administration triumph in San Francisco would mean the State will go Republican in November.

Reed's following in Kansas City has consistently saved the Democratic party at every election since 1908, when Taft carried Hadley into the Governorship, the only Republican Governor Missouri has had since the early 70s.

Year after year the Democratic ticket comes into Kansas City defeated, only to be put over the top with a huge Democratic majority in this district, which belongs to Reed and no one else.

And without Reed, local leaders confess Missouri can be safely classed as an extremely doubtful State, regardless of the Democratic nominee. On the League of Nations, Reed undoubtedly represented the majority of his following in Missouri. Some maintain this question alone will throw many Democrats off the ticket whether Reed finally is seated or not.

And Reed, it is known, plans to stump the State in an anti-League campaign immediately after the convention.

GEORGIA DEMOCRATS THREATEN TO BOLT

Seating of Palmer Men Has Strong Reaction.

Special to THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD.

ATLANTA, June 26.—The action of the Democratic National Committee at San Francisco in seating the Palmer delegation from Georgia over the Hoke Smith-Tom Watson group, regularly chosen by the State convention, has caused such an unusual situation that many political experts here are predicting that in the event of A. Mitchell Palmer being nominated for President the Democrats will have a difficult time carrying this State. Several experts declare that the National Committee has aroused such a fighting spirit that even any other candidate will not have the walk away that Democratic nominees have always had heretofore.

The Smith-Watson faction in the recent preferential primaries carried the State by more than 50,000 majority over the Palmer delegates. But by virtue of the county unit rule, which has for years been the curse of Georgia politics, Palmer went into the State convention with a small plurality of county unit votes.

Thousands of Georgia Democrats, to whom the voting of the Republican ticket has been unthinkable, are declaring that no candidate who seems to have the indorsement of the President will get their votes. They are so bitter against Mr. Wilson and his policies and over what they consider the disfranchising of the majority of the State's voters that they intend either to vote for Harding or not go to the polls at all.

The situation that has thus arisen is extremely unusual, even in a State where politics is always seething and where unusual situations are the rule. Thomas W. Hardwick, formerly United States Senator, has already announced himself as a candidate for Governor on a straight out anti-Wilson platform. Mr. Hardwick has the support of Tom Watson, who has a tremendous personal following everywhere in the State, and who can always be depended upon to make things exceedingly warm for his political opponents.

More than that, plans are being formed to put into the field an anti-Wilson candidate for Congress in every district in the State, and indications are that these plans will be carried out no matter who is nominated by the San Francisco convention. It is a certainty that the plans will be carried out if Palmer is nominated.

HARDING HAS DAY OF MUCH NEEDED REST

Relaxes at Home of His Colleague, Senator Frelinghuysen, in Raritan, N. J.

RARITAN, N. J., June 27.—Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican Presidential nominee, for the first time since he was nominated two weeks ago enjoyed a day of rest at the country home of his friend and colleague, Senator Joseph R. Frelinghuysen, here to-day.

Tired and fatigued after several months' hard work in the Senate, interspersed with a strenuous pre-convention campaign and many conferences after he was nominated, Senator Harding has given up all political work during his stay here and is devoting most of his time to relaxation. He has seen no political callers and no definite engagements have been made for him here. The plan of doing a little work on his speech of acceptance while here has been abandoned and the Senator will not resume compilation of the draft until after he returns to Washington.

The Senator and Mrs. Harding attended church this morning and passed the rest of the day quietly at The Hills, the Frelinghuysen ancestral estate. They worshipped at the Third Dutch Reformed Church, a small, quaint, colonial type structure on the main street of the village of Raritan. Senator Frelinghuysen's father was one of the founders of the church, which was built in 1851, and Senator Frelinghuysen himself is an elder there.

Senator and Mrs. Frelinghuysen and their eldest daughter, Victoria, accompanied Senator and Mrs. Harding to church. Apparently but few persons in town were aware of the presence of their distinguished visitor, because fewer than 100 persons attended the service and there was only a handful of the curious outside to catch a glimpse of the nominee as he entered and left the edifice.

There was no departure from the usual church service. An American flag at the right of the pulpit was the only decoration. The Rev. J. A. Lumley, the pastor, chose for his text the tenth chapter of Romans, first verse: "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved."

In the course of the sermon, which had been prepared without knowledge that the nominee was to attend the service, Mr. Lumley said:

"The whole nation must return by the way of statesmanlike nobility to world respecting national integrity. Men must be saved from the deadly thirst for unholy power and a vainglorious attempt to wreck our national life on the altar of their unjustifiable ambition."

"The nation must be safeguarded against the narrow visioned adventures who would crucify the best that the worst might be enthroned."

"The municipality must be saved from the fallacies of the shams and shallows of personal liberty and licensed un-Americanism."

"The people need to be saved from their sins, from their devious social fallacies, from sins in the market place, from sins in the social set, from sins in the highways of industry, from sins in legislative halls and from sins in the church of Jesus Christ."

Senator and Mrs. Harding, who are Baptists, followed the service with deep interest, joining in the singing of the hymns and the scriptural responsive reading by the congregation. No direct reference to the nominee's presence was made from the pulpit, although in the course of his prayers the pastor gave thanks that "the Lord has looked upon us with favor," and asked that divine blessing and restored health be granted to "those in legislative relation to government and those in executive positions" who are weary of mind and body.

After the service the pastor came down from the pulpit and was introduced by Senator Frelinghuysen to the nominee and members of his party. Senator Harding congratulated the pastor on the "fine service" and then shook hands with members of the congregation.

tion who crowded about him. One elderly man grasped Senator Harding and Frelinghuysen by the arms and proudly remarked:

"Here are three good old typesetters." Senator Harding, who is owner and publisher of the Marion (Ohio) Star, started his journalistic career by setting type. Senator Frelinghuysen conducted a small printing establishment here while attending school.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Plans of Senator Harding, the Republican Presidential candidate, to conduct a "front porch" campaign are opposed by some Senators and other Republican leaders from the West. These leaders think the Senator should make at least one "swing around the circle" with speeches in the principal cities of the West so as to come into closer personal touch with the voters in that section.

Under Senator Harding's present plans he will spend virtually all his time between now and the election at his home in Marion, Ohio, speaking to delegations from various parts of the country which will visit him. Some short trips would be made by the Senator to speak on set occasions in nearby cities.
